BOOKS with Chris Jull

Instalment two...

This is the look at plot driven stories, without recurring characters.

As threatened, at the end of the last column, I'll start with Thomas Perry. His most recent titled "Murder Book" features, former Chicago cop turned private eye, Harry Duncan. He investigates organized crime in Indiana and Chicago. Mr. Perry's brand of non-stop action will grab you and not let go.

There is a group of authors, that to provide an over simple plot device, involve a relatively innocent person, or family, caught in the grip of criminal enterprise.

Rick Mofina, in "Every Thing She Feared" tells of the off-spring of serial killers. Great plot with a snake of twists, will keep you on the edge of your seat.

Harlan Coben wrote some stories with regular character, sports agent cum private eye Myron Bolitar. His more recent books are of ordinary folks caught in bigger machinations. In his latest, "I Will Find You", a father is in prison for the murderf his son. He has help busting out to find the truth.
